

Brief CV

Marina Isidori is full Professor of Hygiene at University of Campania “L. Vanvitelli” – Italy. She is a biologist specialized in Human Nutrition and Food Science. She is the Coordinator of Bachelor and Master Degree courses in Biology at University of Campania “L. Vanvitelli”, Italy. She has published more than 70 papers in peer-reviewed journals and has been serving as an editorial board member of Mutation Research - Genetic Toxicology and Environmental Mutagenesis.

The research field of Marina Isidori is focused on toxic and genotoxic effects of environmental and food pollutants in in vivo and in vitro experimental systems and recently, in exposed humans trying to understand the connections between the environment and human health. Her expertise covers also the endocrine disruption activity of chemical hazards in water and food.