

E F I S I O P I T Z A L I S is Full Professor in Architectural Design in the Department of Architecture and Industrial Design in the University of Unicompania "Luigi Vanvitelli". He is theoretical and research work is focused on modernist movements, whose genealogical sources he interprets, and is conducted in Roma, Aversa, Napoli. His experimental architecture is seen through participation in international competitions, in which he has received numerous awards. Among these may be mentioned the second degree phases for the Centro Congressi Italia in Roma, for the extension of the Galleria Comunale di Arte Moderna e Contemporanea in Roma, for the European Library of Information and Culture in Milano. His interests lie both in the sphere of multipurpose building complexes and in the area of landscape and urban design. His work is published in Architectural Journals and Catalogues and as be shown in solo and group exhibitions, including a retrospective at the AAM Gallery in Roma, and the group show at the XIV quadriennale in Napoli. He is also active in journalism as an author and editor contributing to publications and Architectural Magazines.